During the development of FIFA 20, it was observed that the exact nature of a player's natural movement cannot be simulated in game - it's not realistic enough. Other mechanics such as whether a player had full control of the ball, was fouled or off balance, or being forced off balance by another player, or two players battling for possession and control of the ball could only be simulated through behaviours. The development team went to great lengths to balance these gameplay systems in order to have them feel authentic and give players the best possible chance of achieving and completing a move. A notable result of this is the introduction of Shot Intelligence. A player will now be able to take a run-up, control the ball with his or her foot and then confidently strike a shot on target. However, many of the intricacies and subtleties of a player's natural movement cannot be replicated this way. So it became necessary to look to the future and develop what is known as 'HyperMotion Technology' or 'HMT.' This is an intelligent physics engine designed to produce more natural and authentic gameplay for players. The team harnessed the data collected from real-life players during the development of FIFA 20, reviewing speed, body angles, and movements. The movements were recorded using sensors to provide a complete picture of where the player is at all times. This is based on the idea that the player's movement isn't just about physically coming into contact with an opponent, but is far more sophisticated. In this way, the players' movements need to be able to reflect how they would naturally react to another player coming into contact with them. The player positions are fully simulated, and they can be taken in any direction, not just towards the ball. There is no single gameplay experience; it's a number of different things happening all at once. The best way to show the difference is to look at a free-kick in the box. It's a situation where a player is running towards a box, or an open space on the pitch. He can play a one-on-one touch pass to a teammate in the box, or he can shoot and pass to a team-mate. With the new physics engine, the player can either decide to go towards the ball to meet the opponent, or go to safety with a first touch. In this way, the movement of the players mirrors the way

Features Key:

- Unparalleled Player Intelligence.

- Move, shoot, pass, dribble, and score with ease in FIFA 22 – the new ball physics mean that you'll feel more in control and ball flight and control than ever before.
 - Find the balance between attack and defence with a new-for-FIFA control scheme: Master your timing with new Tactical First Touch (TFT) control, which improves touch, makes it easier to play in deeper positions, and lowers the touch requirements on more-difficult passes.

Powered by Football™, EA SPORTS™ FIFA 22 brings the game even closer to the real thing with fundamental gameplay advances and a new season of innovation across every mode. FIFA is the world's leading sports gaming franchise, with more than 350 million players in over 100 countries. The award-winning franchise will release FIFA 22 in September, with over 75 million players from around the world waiting to step onto the pitch and play the game. The new FIFA is more responsive and agile than ever before, allowing players to quickly take on opponents, complete passes, and create something truly special. With the introduction of the new Dribbling Control system, passing has never been more fluid and responsive. Off the ball, players are given more control of their actions while receiving possession, resulting in greater freedom when making offensive runs at their opponents. Players now have more agility and defensive positioning after losing the ball, allowing them to dodge away from opponents and block shots. Opponents now have more control over how they deal with the ball, with more physical and creative ways to come up with an opening and create space. Furthermore, as the new ball behaviour model is used, the new ball's properties affect the game play. The new toolkit will continue to evolve, providing unprecedented opportunities for playmakers in possession. With more than 80 actions already available on the new ball, there are countless ways to use every tool to the best of your abilities. Ball Physics is the new name for the new ball physics model. It has been developed to allow new and more refined behaviours for the ball while maintaining the accuracy and fluidity of the real ball's physics and behaviours. Details New Mastery Levels New Mastery Levels. Take your favourite player to a higher level. Experience a richer level of interaction, mastery, and power as you play against high-level players in MyPlayer mode. If you're an Expert level player, you'll see how your skills stack up against the best in the world. If you're a Platinum-level player, you'll continue to hone your skills in the most challenging game modes. Player-Cam Player-Cam. The Player-Cam view has been upgraded for a more immersive, three-dimensional experience. Now using detailed player models, reaction shots, and vastly improved animations, the view offers a more detailed view of the action on the pitch
