Fans will be able to access this data via FIFA's new experimental feature, and the team dynamic will influence its usage in real-time. During the match, you'll see the "HyperMotion Technology" icon on the squad display, which you can activate by pressing the Y button. You can watch your squad's live input (that's the best way to see how it's performing as a whole) or check the post-match data in the player statistics. For example, in-game scoring trends are available, including chances created, shots, shots on goal, crosses, corners and headers. The exact data used is based on real-life statistics and reflects the game situation - for example, a goal from a free kick is more likely to count in the scoring stats than one scored from a corner. Here's what you'll see: The squad and team news displays will also tell you how many data sources their formation has used. The training interface now features an option to find a training match based on a certain number of parameters, such as opponents, game style and more. Every additional match that can be found will offer improved training quality, and your team will learn from the experiences of the other teams. FIFA Gameplay One of the most important games to play with friends to rank up is now even more accessible. We've given all the players new control options to make the most of FIFA's roster of over 1,800 real-life players and introduced more items on the field. As you go for headers, you can now place the ball under your feet from the spot to ensure a simple one-on-one header. Or throw the ball with more directness, spread out your shots and use more flicks to pass out of pressure. We've even introduced a whole range of new dribbling techniques to give you more space, more options and more control over the match. New in-game AI, ball contact and release speed, defensive tackling and C1v2 dribbling have been enhanced to make it even tougher to pull off the perfect pass, tough pass or through-ball. The new first touch and first touch control adjustments on a player's right and left foot allow you to check the opposition players' first touch or their defensive positioning to find the optimal passing route. For example, you can set

What's new in Fifa 22:

- Football reinvented - incredible speed, quicker passing, magic tricks and brand new play styles. The way you tackle is different too: faster, balanced, and with greater intensity. Defenders are more committed in the tackle and, in turn, aggressive saves and tackles increase. No holds barred. Turn tackles into a beautiful combination of aggression and attacking flair. The ball is flying around the pitch and teammates are ready to tap you into a scoring run. The ball controls are easy, responsive and intelligent. New pass-and-move directionals, the ball turns towards you when you're rolling it towards an open player, and even the defender will retreat as you go for your shot. You can now control the pace of the game. Fast play gives the ball movement speed; Slow play slows the game to a standstill. Play like the pros. .
