Torrent. Andrew Duncombe Andrew Duncombe (25 June 1741 – 15 June 1823) was a British barrister, and friend of Richard Brinsley Sheridan. Life He was the only son of William Duncombe, a London merchant of the company of "Duncombe & Moise", and his wife, Anne, daughter of John Fleming, of Ayr, Scotland. Duncombe was born in St. James's Square, Westminster, on 25 June 1741. His father, an Irishman, was mayor of Liverpool, and one of the best-known merchants of Liverpool; Duncombe himself, having a taste for the law, was sent to Eton in 1754, and took part in a singular event there, namely, that in which Lord Lyttelton's play of Amphitryon was performed, in which the barristers for the prosecution and defense respectively were his two uncles, the latter of whom spoke so learned a part that he was received with great applause. Upon his return to Liverpool, he engaged in his father's business, and was in 1759 returned to Westminster, where he was called to the bar, and began practice in the court of King's Bench. In 1770 he was appointed a teller at the Exchequer, and five years later was called to the Gray's Inn bar, where he became a bencher c6a93da74d
