LOTUS-Simulator ist ein kleiner Simulation der.Q: Converting vertex shader to compute shader I'm trying to convert a vertex shader that has a state variable for lighting to a compute shader. From my understanding, I need to create a struct with two members for the inputs and outputs. But the issue is there are no inputs in the vertex shader, so the struct definition doesn't have any. How do I do this? A: A compute shader has no inputs, because it doesn't generate geometry. You can place a uniform into the render target to store lighting information and pass it to the shader. You can also convert a glsl shader to c++, or you can write your own
